THE MIDDLE SPRING PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

PREFACE.

It was the desire of my husband, Gilbert E. Swope, author of "A History of the Big Spring Presbyterian Church," that I should publish the data he collected regarding the Middle Spring congregation, arranging the records according to the plan he outlined, thus completing, what to him was a labor of love. I have endeavored to carry out his wishes as nearly as possible, and it has been a pleasure to follow the guidance of one, who, though talented and successful in literary pursuits, willingly laid aside his pen, at a time when his career seemed brightest, reposing in me the confidence, that his cherished work would not fail of completion.

We are convinced that nothing can be added to the history of the church life, so fully and excellently prepared by Rev. S. S. Wylie, in 1876. The book, however, is out of print, and as the result of a demand for a similar work, this volume has been carefully compiled, and the archives of the congregation preserved in the form herewith presented.

The records prior to 1800 were burned, but all that could be obtained, relating to the church during the nineteenth century, has been collected, and by research and diligent labor, valuable genealogical and historical data has been rescued from oblivion. No congregation that we know of, offered a greater number of brave men, to be sacrificed, if needs be, for the independence of our nation; no church has given more of her sons to the ministry, and no people are better fitted to defend the doctrines of Presbyterianism and the glories of the christian faith, than the adherents of Middle Spring. We gratefully acknowledge and express our appreciation of the interest and co-operation of Dr. William H. Egle, Rev. S. S. Wylie, and J. W. Strohm, who have rendered assistance in completing this contribution to the history of Cumberland Valley.

Middle Spring Presbyterian Church.

Sketch of the Church by Rev. S. S. Wylie.

THE aboriginal owners and occupants of Kittochtinny (now improperly called Cumberland Valley)—the word means “endless mountains”—were the Delaware tribes, called also Leni Lenapes. They held the country from the Delaware River to the Kittochtinny or North Mountain, and as far South as the Potomac. The Shawnese Indians, who moved North from Florida in 1689, it would seem also occupied a portion of this valley lying along the Conodoguinet. Both the Delaware and Shawnese tribes were partially conquered by the Six Nations, and removed at an early period to the banks of the Ohio.

The Six Nations, called also the “United People”, and by the French the Iroquois, were a powerful Indian confederacy of at first five and afterwards six tribes who, in the earlier part of the last century, held undisputed sway from the Atlantic to the great lakes of Erie and Ontario, and as far south as the head waters of the Delaware and Susquehanna. They gradually extended their power over south-eastern Pennsylvania, including this valley. Partial treaties were made between the Proprietary Government and the "united people" in 1700, and at other subsequent dates; but it was not until October, 1836, when there assembled in Philadelphia, twenty-three chiefs of the Six Nations, that a full and absolute title to all the land west of the Susquehanna, including our own beautiful valley, was granted to Thomas, John and Richard Penn, sons of William Penn. A copy of this deed is in the office of the Deputy Secretary of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Settlements were made in this valley several years previous to this treaty. Scotch Irish settlements were made at Octorara Creek and at Pequea in 1717, and at Paxton and Donegal in 1722. John Harris came to the present site of Harrisburg, in 1725. On or before the year 1730, the Chambers brothers, attracted by the glowing accounts of the great springs and fine water powers of this valley, given by early adventurers, left their homes on Fishing Creek, a short distance above Harrisburg, and settled at three of the great springs of the valley; Benjamin and Joseph at Falling Spring, James at Big Spring, and Robert at Middle Spring, on land now in possession of W. D. Means.

From 1730 to 1736, the Proprietary encouraged immigration to this valley, no doubt to hasten its possession from the Indians. In 1734, a commission was granted to Samuel Blunston, authorizing him to grant licenses, in writing, to settle land west of the Susquehanna. They were an inception of title to much of the most desirable lands of this valley, with which the Indians were generally satisfied. This, with the suspension of the Maryland line controversy, and the acknowledged fertility of the soil, and the beauty and attractiveness of the county, caused a rapid influx of inhabitants, so that in 1736, the settlements extended from the banks of the Long Crooked River to the banks of the Potomac. There were small settlements of Germans near Greencastle, and also along the west bank of the Susquehanna made at this time, with a Welsh settlement made on what is now called Welsh Run, in Franklin county, but with these exceptions, the whole Kittochtinny Valley was peopled by Irish and Scotch-Irish, or their immediate descendants, which was true of this valley up to 1750.

We find, as might have been expected that one of the first arrangements of these early settlers, was to have the gospel preached in their midst. The most of them had been reared in the stimulating atmosphere of the Protestant faith; they had been taught to worship God, nor was the precious legacy of a free, unfettered religion which they and their fathers purchased by blood and persecution, to be neglected or forgotten by them, though living in the midst of the hardships and perils of a life in the wilderness. We find that they soon made application to Presbytery for supplies to break unto them the bread of life; and the labors of these devoted pioneers of the gospel, form the germs of the churches stretched throughout this valley.

In 1732, Donegal Presbytery was formed by the Synod of Philadelphia, the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of which then included the country now comprised in Dauphin, Lancaster, Adams, York, Cumberland, Franklin and Perry counties. At a meeting of this Presbytery, held at Nottingham, Oct. 16, 1734, there is this record: "Ordered that M. A. Craighead, supply over the river, two or three Sabbaths in November." This is the first Presbyterial record of preaching in this valley, and Mr. Alexander Craighead, then quite a young man, has the distinguished honor of being the first pioneer, who, by order of Presbytery, proclaimed Christ and Him crucified, among these hills and valleys. On two subsequent occasions he was sent on the same mission.

In 1735, Rev. John Thompson, was sent to the settlement along the Conodoguinet. He had formerly been pastor of Chestnut Level Church, but now seems to have been an itinerant in the employ of Donegal Presbytery.

Rev. Samuel Gelston, who formerly had been settled at New London, Chester County, Pa., was in 1736, sent by Presbytery to O'Pekin, in Virginia, Conestoga and Conodoguinet. In this same year, Rev. William Bertram, then pastor of Paxton and Derry Churches, also was sent and preached along the Conodoguinet. This year—1736—supplies were first sent to "Conococheague settlement." I have little doubt but that some of these ministers, and it may be others whose names are lost, preached in this vicinity. Certain it is, that there were quite a number of settlers in 1736, stretched along the Conodoguinet and its south branch, and the same is true of Middle Spring, from its mouth to near its source. It was the almost invariable practice of the early settlers to locate along streams of water and gushing springs. This will account for these places being settled first.

The commonly accepted theory, in relation to the early history of this church, and one which has been generally believed, and consequently found its way into public print, is that this church does not date back prior to the year 1740, which is several years later than some others adjacent, and that Rev. John Blair was its first pastor, both of which are incorrect.

In the early Donegal minutes, this church, with Big Spring, was called by the general name of "Hopewell." To distinguish it from Big Spring, which was called Lower Hopewell, this church was called Upper Hopewell. We learn from Rupp's History of the six counties, that this valley in the year 1735, was divided into two large townships, by a line running north from the South Mountain, by the way of the Great Spring, to the Kittoctinny, or North Mountain; that the easternmost was called Pennsborough, the western Hopewell. Middle, Rocky and Big Springs, were all in the limits of Hopewell township. In like manner, as the churches of Carlisle and Silver Spring, first took their original general name of Pennsborough from the name of the township in which they were situated, so Middle and Big Spring took their original, general names from the township of Hopewell, in which they were situated. So also the churches throughout the Conococheague settlement, took their general name, Conococheague, from the name of the district, just as the Pennsborough churches were distinguished by Upper and Lower, and the West; so Hopewell was distinguished by Lower and Upper, by the flow of the water. Big Spring being called Lower and Middle Spring, Upper Hopewell. As additional evidence that these churches bore these names in their early history, we quote from the Donegal records of 1739. "Nottingham, June 2, 1739.—Mr. Cavin is ordered to supply at Upper Hopewell; time not specified.

"Chestnut Level, Sept. 5, 1739.—A supplication from the people of Hopewell, requesting supplies, was presented."

"Conococheague, Nov. 17, 1739.—Mr Thompson is ordered to supply at Lower Hopewell, on the last Sabbath of this month."

"Ordered that Mr. Anderson supply at Upper Hopewell tomorrow, and Mr. Boyd at Lower Hopewell tomorrow. Mr. Cavin to supply at Upper Hopewell the fourth Sabbath of December, the first Sabbath in February, and the the third Sabbath in March. Mr. Sank-ey at Hopewell, the 5th inst."

A writer in an issue of the Presbyterian, of Feb. 15, 1853, whose article in every other respect evinces much learning and accuracy, affirms that Middle Spring Church, in its earliest history, was called Upper and Big Spring Lower Hopewell. Webster, in his history of the Presbyterian Church in America, states the same. We are disposed to believe from some hints that Rocky Spring Church was also called by the name of Upper Hopewell. The Donegal records say :

"Pequa, Oct., 1738.—Robert Henry, a commissioner from Hopewell, complained that the people of Falling Spring are about to encroach upon Hopewell congregation." This was in the matter of building a house of worship at Falling Spring, the old Presbytery rule being ten miles apart. Now it would be utterly absurd to suppose that the people of Big Spring, twenty miles distant, and great folly to suppose that the people of Middle Spring, thirteen miles distant from Chambersburg, would complain of this matter to Presbytery. But if Rocky Spring was then called and included in Hopewell charge, the explanation is plain enough, as it was but five miles distant from Falling Spring. In that year Rocky Spring had been granted by Presbytery the privilege of erecting their first house of worship on the ground it now occupies for that purpose, and for Falling Spring to erect their house five miles distant would be a proper ground of complaint to Presbytery as an encroachment upon their congregational territory. Again Richard Webster in his history in speaking of Rev. John Blair, incidentally remarks that Rocky and Middle Spring were both called Upper Hopewell.

We are, we think, warranted in the conclusions, that Big Spring was in its early history, called Lower, Middle Spring Upper Hopewell and Rocky Spring perhaps the same, and the general name, Hopewell, designated them all. These conclusions are important in determining who was the first pastor.

The first pastor of this church, in connection with Big Spring, was Rev. Thomas Craighead, who may also have preached at Rocky Spring. At a stated meeting of Donegal Presbytery, held at Chestnut Level, April 6, 1737, Robert Henry, the Commissioner from Hopewell, asks for the services of Mr. Thomas Craighead as stated supply, which was granted. "Nottingham, June 22nd, 1737.—The people of Hopewell request of Presbytery the privilege of making out a call to Mr. Thomas Craighead." "Derry, Nov. 17, 1737.—A call was presented to Presbytery by the people of Hopewell for the services of Mr. T. Craighead, which was accepted by him."

He was not installed as pastor over the people of Hopéwell for almost one year after this date, or until the second Tuesday of October, 1738, and for two reasons: The first was that there existed difficulties in settling the boundery lines between Hopewell and Pennsborough, and erection of one of the houses of Hopewell. The second was that Mr. Thomas Craighead had, without consulting his session, suspended his wife from "church privilege" because she failed to live in peace in the same house with her daughter-in-law. He did not live to enjoy his labors in this charge quite seven months, but died in the last of April, 1739.

The reasons which have led to the conclusion that he was the properly constituted minister of more than the church which is now called Big Spring, are these :

First. Every other minister contemporaneous with him, had charge of from two to four congregations. On Nov. 15, 1732, Rev. William Bertram was installed over Paxton and Derry. On Nov. 14, 1739, Rev. Samuel Thompson was ordained pastor of Upper and Lower Pennsborough. Rev. Samuel Cavin, from Nov. 15, 1737, acted as stated supply to all the churches of the Conococheague settlement until Nov. 16, 1739, when he was installed pastor of Falling Spring and Greencastle. If, therefore, Mr. Craighead was pastor only of Big (for that was then called Lower Hopewell), this is the only exception throughout the valley. But where is the evidence that at this time Big Spring or any other church near us had the means and the population to support a pastor herself?

Second. There is strong evidence to believe that Robert Henry, who, at this time and on various occasions acted as commissioner for Hopewell to Presbytery, belonged to Upper and not to Lower Hopewell.

Third. There is good evidence for the statement that at that time (1738) this section of the Valley, between Shippensburg and the North Mountain, was as thickly settled as almost any other portion of it. It is a matter of history that the first land in this valley taken up under the "Samuel Blunston license" was by Benjamin Furley, and afterwards occupied by the Herrons, McCombs and Irvins, a large tract lying along the Conodoguinet, in the direction and in the neighborhood of Orrstown.

At the house of Widow Piper, in Shippensburg, as early as 1735, a number of persons from along the Conodoguinet and Middle Spring, met to remonstrate against the road which was then being made from the Susquehanna to the Potomac through "The Barrens," but wanted it made through the Conodoguinet settlement, which was more thickly settled. This indicates that at this time a number of people lived in this vicinity.

Fourth. A writer, whose name we are ignorant of, in an old, religious newspaper, in an article entitled, "The Three Springs," uses these words: "The congregation beyond the Susquehanna which first settled a pastor, was callen Upper and Lower Hopewell. His name was Thomas Craighead."

Fifth. Rev. Richard Webster, in speaking of these three churches, in connection with Rev. John Blair, says: "These places had been served by the Rev. Thomas Craighead." To any thoughtful, unprejudiced mind, the evidence is sufficient that Thomas Craighead, at this church, as well as at Big Spring, pointed men to the cross, and that these churches were honored above any others in this valley, in having first the "ministry of the word."

After the death of Mr. Craighead, Hopewell charge "was supplied by Donegal Presbytery." Rev. Samuel Thompson, James Anderson, Samuel Cavin, and Richard Sankey acted as supplies in 1739. Shortly after this, or in 1741, occurred the first and lamentable rupture in the Presbyterian Church of America. This schism grew out of the conflicting views of the great revival which in 1732 commenced in New Jersey, and in a short time swept over most of the Atlantic States: some ascribing it to God as a genuine work of the Spirit; others looked upon it as a work of man and the devil; some said it was of the head; others of the heart.

Another cause of this schism was the conflicting views of the standard of education to be insisted upon of candidates for admission into the ministry. The one party at first more numerous, and in most respects the more rigid in their views, composed of the Synod of Philadelphia, were called the "Old Side." The other party, at first represented by the New Brunswick Presbytery, and afterwards by the Synod of New York, were called the "New Side," or "New Sights."

This painful schism sent a ploughshare through all the churches, and the "Three Springs" were no exception. A majority of the people of these three congregations, as well as a majority of the people of the other churches of the valley adhered to the "New Side." The Old Side party in these three churches had, for a time, the services of Rev. James Lyon, a probationer of Donegal Presbytery. The "New Side" had the services of Rev. James Campbell—the unconverted minister—and he was followed by the eloquent, pathetic Welshman, the Rev. John Rowland.

On December 27, 1742, Rev. John Blair was installed pastor of the Middle Spring Church, in connection with Big Spring and Rocky Spring. The old session records of his ministry, though very largely occupied with what might seem to many, petty cases of discipline, and though not giving his first name, throws some light upon the division of his labors among these three congregations. The record says the "ministers labors shall be equally divided, a third part to each place, as being most for the glory of God, and the good of his people."

While pastor of this church he purchased and owned the farm adjoining Middle Spring church lands. Here it is said he and his wife, a Miss Durborrow, of Philadelphia, lived in a style quite above that of their plain countrified parishioners. The people, it is said, were very kind to Mr. Blair and his young wife, so that they often had a superabundance of the good things of this life, but it is added that this kindness took a more substantial form, viz: Several of the prominent men of the church met, among whom were David Herron, John Finley, John Reynolds, and John McClay, and deeded to him a farm, then owned by the church, of from two to two hundred and fifty acres, with the explicit understanding that Mr. Blair, would stay and preach for them his lifetime, but Mr. Blair being a shrewd, covetous, worldlywise man, sold the farm, placed the money in his pocket, and then soon left the church. This tradition has floated down the stream of time, and is now believed by many in this community. There is, however, not the shadow of a truth in the story, and has the effect of tarnishing the reputation of an otherwise good, zealous and godly minister. There is a patent recorded, Dec. 4, 1753, taken out by John Blair, to secure a warrant for two hundred and twelve acres of land, dated October 5, 1743, situated in the manor of Louthier, Lancaster, afterwards Cumberland and Franklin counties, by virtue of which, Thomas and Richard Penn deeded this same farm to John Blair, in consideration of £32 17s. and half penny "quit rent" due each year. This farm he held for seventeen years and sold it to Samuel Rippy. The exact date of his leaving this field of labor, is involved in no little uncertainty. Seeing he was never a member of the Donegal Presbytery (because he belonged to the New Side party) its records in no way assist us, and the minutes of the New Castle Presbytery, (New Side,) the one to which he belonged, are so far as can be ascertained, hopelessly lost. Webster, in his history, and Sprague, in his "Annals of the American Pulpit" who quotes from Webster's manuscript, both give the date of his leaving the "Three Springs" of Dec. 28, 1748. The last record in the session book of his ministry kept for this church, is dated Feb. 1, 1794. There is, on the other hand, evidence which favors a much later date as the correct time of his leaving this church. There are in existence two receipts the first one reads thus- -

Received of John Johnson the just and full sum of two pounds, fourteen shillings, being four shillings over his full subscription for these five years last past.

“Nov. 24, 1747.

by me, John Blair.”

A second—

Sept. 11, 1757, received from John Johnson, two pounds, two pence, which appears to me to be in full of steepens due Rev. John Blair. “by me, David Megaw.”

A careful reading of these two receipts indicates a much later date than 1748 as the time of Mr. Blair's resignation. If he left Middle Spring in 1748, then his life for ten years until 1757, the date of his settlement at Faggs' Manor, is a blank. Neither Hodge, Alexander, Sprague or Webster, who refer to him in their histories, throw any light upon this period of his life. Is it likely that this man in the prime of life and in the full possession of his many talents, could or would have remained in idleness these many years? Is it not more reasonable to suppose that he was still laboring in the vineyard of the Lord? Again, Sprague, Webster and Alexander assign as the only cause of his leaving this field to be “trouble with the Indians.” But any one conversant with the history of those times, is well aware that throughout this valley in 1748 there was scarcely an isolated Indian murder. Dr. Alexander in his history of the “Log College” in speaking of Mr. Blair uses this rather striking language: “By reason of the hostile incursions of the Indians, his people were obliged to leave their rude habitations on the frontier, and retreat into the more densely populated parts of the colony. Mr. Blair never returned to the place from which he was driven by the incursions of the savages. Such language does not comport with the events of the year 1748. But we all know after the disastrous defeat of Braddock, on the 9th of July 1755, and the retreat of Dunbar, the tardy, this Valley, in every part, was swept by fire and sword, and scalping knife and tomahawk of an exultant foe, when thirteen-hundred and eighty-four refugees were huddled together in the fort at Shippensburg, and seven hundred families left this valley and their all, for their lives, and removed to Lancaster and York Counties, Pa. Dr. Alexander's description of the cause of this leaving, corresponds exactly to the period of 1755 and 1756. It can perhaps never be definitely settled when John Blair left the Valley, but the weight of evidence seems to favor a later date than 1748.

After he left, these churches were supplied by members of the New Castle Presbytery (New Side) up to the date of the re-union in 1758. Amongst these were some very distinguished men: Rev. Joseph Tate, the eloquent John Strain, Rev. Andrew Boyd, Rev. Charles Beatty and Rev. Gilbert Tennent.

At a meeting of Donegal Presbytery in 1760, Middle Spring Church, (first time this name is given on Presbytery records) presented a call to Rev. John Carmichael of New Brunswick Presbytery. This call was never accepted.

The Presbytery of Donegal met at Chanceford, June 18, 1765. A call was brought in from the congregation of Middle Spring, to Robert Cooper, a probationer, and a supplication to Presbytery, praying them to present said call. Messrs. Campbell and Benjamin Blythe, Commissioners from Middle Spring, informed Presbytery that for Mr. Cooper's support the congregation "will make good to him the sum of one hundred pounds per annum, ($250.00.)"

At Marsh Creek, Oct. 7, 1765, Mr. Cooper accepted

this call, and ordination exercises were appointed him at a meeting of Presbytery at Middle Spring, Nov. 21, 1765. No objections having been presented against Mr. Cooper being ordained and installed pastor of the church, Presbytery concluded to proceed thereto, and accordingly, after Mr. Bay had preached a sermon on 1 Corinthians, 9: 16, "Woe unto me if I preach not the Gospel," and after the engagements taken in due form, Mr. Cooper was solemnly ordained to the gospel ministry with fasting and prayer, and the interposition of hands of the Presbytery, and installed as pastor of the congregation.

In this, his first and only field, he labored as pastor over thirty-one years, although the inscription on his tomb stone gives a longer period. This is because he continued to live in the bounds of the congregation nine years after his resignation, during most of which time the church was vacant and he acted as pastor.

In the autumn of 1796, at a meeting of Presbytery at Middle Spring, Dr. Cooper resigned the charge of this church. The Presbytery deferred action, until the following spring, hoping that the strange brooding melancholy, which at this time overwhelmed his mind in gloom, occasioned by a dropsical habit, might pass away; but at the spring meeting of Presbytery, held April 12, 1797, Mr. Cooper, renewed his application and the congregation through his commissioners, Benjamin Blythe and Col. Robert Peebles, reluctantly concurring, the relation was dissolved, the congregation agreeing to pay his full salary and besides deal generously with him.

As pastor of this church, he performed his labor, with great fidelity, usefulness and success. The congregation prospered greatly under his ministry, and attained at its close, great size. He watched over his flock, over which the Holy Ghost had made him overseer, with uncommon solicitude and care, as a father over his child. He, pastorially, as well as socially, visited systematically, his large field again and again, and was usually accompanied in this work by his faithful and loyal wife. He took special interest in, and pains to catechise the young. In his social intercourse with his people, he was remarkably free and jocose, and being the happy possessor of an abundance of Irish wit and humor, his visits were prized at every house and around every festive board in his congregation. He was blessed to an unusual degree with the unwavering affection of his people, to the close of his life. He lived and owned the farm a short distance south of Newburg. This farm he purchased of John Trimble, on the 7th of June, 1776, and then contained two hundred and seven acres and seventy-four perches. The stone end of the farm house, adjacent to the road, is said to have been built by the congregation for him.

His personal appearance was not prepossessing; of medium stature, of five feet ten inches, of a thin, spare habit; his face, except when animated, wore a sad melancholy aspect, in the latter years of his life. He always wore a large wig. Often in the warmer weather, he would take off his wig, hang it upon the wall immediately behind him, lay aside any outer apparel which would trammel his delivery, and with all possible earnestness, press home the truth upon his hearers. It was customary, during the greater portion of his ministry to give out one line of the Psalm at a time; afterwards, the leader of the singing being urgent, two lines were given out. When the Psalm books were introduced, quite a serious difficulty sprang up in the congregation, which lasted more than one year. Some of the "pious old folks" contended as they could not read the Psalms very well, they might commit a sin, whereas, when Dr. Cooper read for them, they knew it was right.

More than one amusing anecdote has been rescued from the oblivion of the past, which incidentally throws not a little light upon the history of the day of Dr. Cooper. One is here given.—He had the custom of calling the roll of the church members every Sabbath morning, and noted the absentees, whom he visited the following week. He also required his members to sing a Psalm each Sabbath morning, going regularly through the book. Now on communion Sabbath—solemn days were those—David Herron's name was called, (he was one of the most regular, reliable and godly members of Dr. Cooper's session,) but there was no response. Amazed, the Dr. stood in silence. The clerk rose at his desk and called again, David Herron! No answer. Early the next morning, the Dr. was seen trotting briskly up the creek; he was hailed by Capt. Hugh Brady, Capt. Strain, Archie Cambridge, as he passed in turn their houses, but there was no stopping him: on he went until he reached the house of Mr. Herron, and passed rapidly in, and meeting Mr. H., said, in his unvarnished way, "not at church yesterday, what is your excuse?" "Well Doctor," said Mr. H., "you know your rules. Yesterday morning I got up a little earlier than usual; ate a little breakfast, read a short chapter, then we kneeled and said a short prayer, and I commenced with the family to sing a Psalm, the one in course being the 119th. I could not violate your rules; I could not pass over it: I did my best but was not able to finish it until in the afternoon." Hereupon the Dr. arose, adjusting his wig, and placing his hand upon the shoulder of his faithful elder, said: "David, your excuse is a good one. I am perfectly satisfied," and then rode home.

From the end of Dr. Cooper's ministry in this church, until the commencement of Mr. Moody's, there was a period of six years, during which the Middle Spring church was supplied by members of the Carlisle Presbytery.

By appointment of Presbytery, Mr. Moody first preached at Middle Spring, on the fifth Sabbath of November, 1801. On the 12th of April, 1803, a call was presented to the Carlisle Presbytery, by this church for the pastoral services of Rev. John Moody, promising him the sum of £175. Mr. Moody accepted this call, and arrangements for his ordination and installation were at once made. He was appointed to prepare a sermon on Rom. 13:10, and Presbytery adjourned to meet at Middle Spring, on the first Tuesday of October, 1803, when after his examinations were approved, Rev. Joshua Williams, D. D., preached the sermon and Rev. Dr. Robert Cathcart, gave the charge to the pastor. He was solemnly set apart to the gospel ministry by prayer and the interposition of hands of the Presbytery and installed over the church. He resigned the charge at the spring meeting of Presbytery, April 1854.

During the history of this long but quiet, harmonious ministry, little of striking interest has fallen under observation to be recorded. In the year 1806, difficulties sprang up between Dr. Moody and many of the people on the subject of baptism, which found their way into Presbytery. It would seem that Dr. Moody had been rather strenuous on the subject of baptismal vows.

It was during his ministry in 1833, the Presbyterian churches of Newburg and Roxbury, were organized by persons who had become more or less alienated from Dr. Moody and the people of Middle Spring Church. The causes of their temporary organization, were these: 1st, —The effects of the revival in the Middle Spring church in 1832, caused by the preaching of Duffield and others. 2.—The attempted introduction of Watts' Psalms and Hymns into the church. 3.—Prayer meetings. Mr. Moody held that leading in prayer by laymen, engendered spiritual pride. 4.—Mr. Moody's neutral position on the temperance question, which was then very prominent. Other minor family matters also entered in. This organization had an up and down existence for about 12 years, when it died out, and the remaining members of it, returned to the old fold. During this period, Rev. Joseph McKee, was called April 11, 1838, by this organization, but was never installed. On Oct. 1, 1839, Rev. Geo. D. Porter was called and installed over this field. He resigned April 13, 1843. He was the only settled pastor of the Newburg and Roxbury churches. It was during his ministry, that the Presbyterian Church of Shippensburg, was organized,—a necessary outgrowth of Middle Spring.

In the earlier part of Mr. Moody's ministry, many of the families of the church, living in Shippensburg, desired a portion of his service. This was never countenanced by a majority of the people, and was never granted. They then, after the removal of Rev. Mr. Walker, pastor of the Associate reformed Church of Shippensburg, sought a union with that church, with the understanding that all parties assist in the remodeling of the house, and in supporting a minister, who was to be selected either from the Presbyterian or associate Reformed church, according to the leadings of Providence.

Under this arrangement, the Rev. H. R. Wilson was called in 1823, and the following families left this church: D. Henderson, Maj. Joseph McKinney, Geo. McGinnis, D. Nevin, Wm. Snodgrass, John McClay, the Cochrans, the Rippies. B. Reynolds, S. Sturgeon, J. Criswell, George Hamil, David Mahan, and others. Rev. H. R. Wilson was succeeded by Revs. Dr. Harper, W. W. Taylor and W. A. McCarrell.

Dr. Moody presented a fine personal appearance, fully six feet in height, with a weight of over two hundred pounds, of fair complexion. During the warm weather of the summer season, he would, while in the pulpit, wear a long, loose gingham gown. One who sat under the sound of his voice for twenty years, uttered these three striking sentences: "I never saw him excited; I never saw him preach in the Middle Spring Church, without the use of his manuscript; I never saw him lift his hand to make a gesture." He was remarkably orderly in all his work. His marriage, communicant and baptismal ceremonies, were models of neatness and scrupulous care. His brief funeral addresses were always to the living. His sermons, though delivered in a sluggish manner, were full of pith and instruction to the hearer.

The last public act of Dr. Moody was attempting to hold a short prayer meeting during a communion season in Middle Spring church, but through frailty of mind, he was unable to properly conduct it. His last official act in the congregation and his five hundred and ninety-fourth wedding, was to officiate at the marriage of Mr. William Ker, of the Big Spring congregation and Miss Elizabeth Orr.

Dr. Moody resigned the pastoral charge of the Middle Spring church, June 11, 1854. It was his desire for the congregation to take immediate steps to secure a successor. In accordance with this wish they invited and heard a number of candidates, and with one voice chose Rev. I. N. Hays as pastor. On June 13, 1854, Mr. Hays was installed pastor of this church, having previously been released from the charge of the Great Conewago church, Adams county, Pa. Here he continued his labors fourteen years and five months. This church at that time presented a wide field for usefulness. The field was white to the harvest. The results of fifty years' sowing were to be reaped. The church was in pressing need of an earnest, laborious, practical self-adapting man, and in the providence of God, as history has plainly demonstrated, the right man was found for the right place. A reformation in the manner and customs of the people, as well as in the discipline and polity of the church was needed, and the session of the church turned with anxious eye to the pastor of the Great Conewago Church, as the instrument under God by whom this great work was to be accomplished.

For four years after the commencement of his ministry here this church enjoyed a continuous revival, during which time there was scarcely a day he could not have gone to some anxious, inquiring soul. In these four years one hundred and forty persons were added to the membership of the church. During all his ministry here a very fair average of additions were made—twenty-three by certificate or examination each year. The church trebled her benevolent contributions, which were perhaps unduly directed to the Foreign Mission work. The bounderies of the congregation were extended; regular preaching was established each alternate Sabbath afternoon at Newburg and Orrstown. These soon became important outposts of this congregation.

A number of families and individuals were brought into the church. They were of an element entirely outside of the Presbyterian faith. I doubt not that during these fourteen years, the very heart of his life and ministry, and the vigor and flower of his manhood, the great spiritual work of his life was accomplished, and Providence opened up another field near by, upon which he at once entered.

After the resignation of I. N. Hays, Middle Spring Church remained vacant for one year and a half, though the pulpit was usually occupied. Several attempts were made to secure a pastor, but on account of division of sentiment in the congregation and other causes, these attempts proved fruitless, until the autumn of 1869, when Rev. D. K. Richardson was called, and having accepted, commenced his labors Jan. 1, 1870, and was installed May 6th of the same year. He resigned the pastoral charge Dec. 21, 1871. The first year of the labors of Mr. Richardson in the Middle Spring church, was one of great discouragement, which arose from an absence of the convicting and converting presence of the Holy Spirit, and disharmony in the church. During the latter part of this year, things became more settled, and there was an increased interest in the preaching of the word. On the third Sabbath of January 1871, during the afternoon service at Newburg, the presence of the Spirit became manifest. It proved to be the Prophet's cloud from the sea, and the harbinger of a gracious revival, which extended pretty generally through the congregation, and resulted in the accession of forty-seven persons to the membership of the church. During his ministry here the church was no doubt greatly benefitted spiritually. The pastor was growing in favor each day with the people, and we have no doubt the dissolution of this pastoral relation was the saddest and most unexpected in the history of the church. This took place December 21, 1871, he having received a call from the church at Greencastle, Pa.

REV. SAMUEL S. WYLIE.

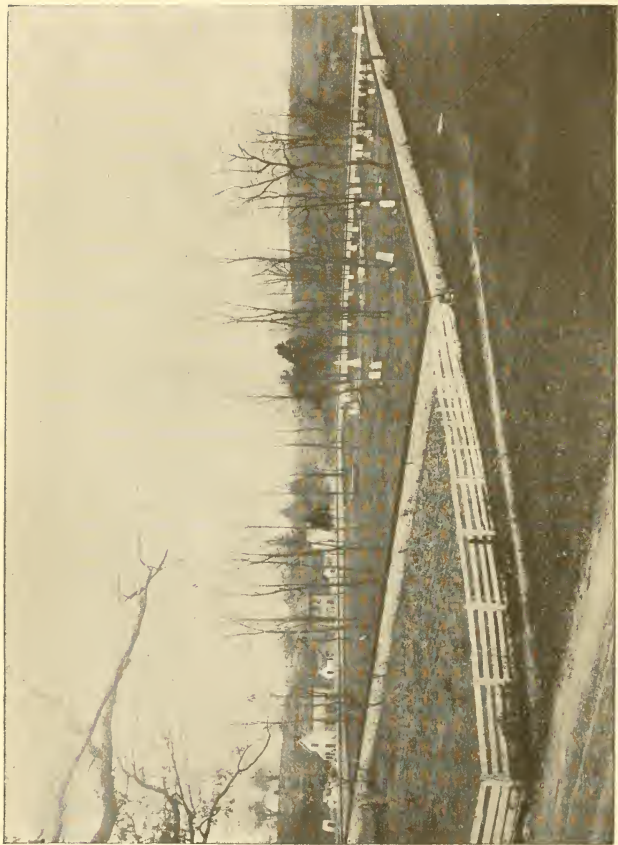

Rev. Samuel S. Wylie was licensed by the Presbytery of Ohio (now Pittsburg,) April 28, 1869, and was installed pastor of the Middle Spring Church June 9, 1872.

PASTORS OF THE MIDDLE SPRING CHURCH.

To the feet of the One Great Teacher
They tenderly led the way.

REV. THOMAS CRAIGHEAD

Rev. Thomas Craighead belonged to a family of ministers. He was a son of Rev. Robert Craighead, a native of Scotland, and a brother of Rev. Robert Craighead, jr., who was moderator of the Synod of Ireland. Thomas was born in Scotland and read medicine there, but afterwards studied theology under his father in Derry. He was licensed to preach the gospel, and was ordained and settled some ten or more years in Ireland. In consequence of a number of grievances to which the Presbyterians were subject, such as "oppressive rents," "the sacramental test" and the "marriage ordinance," he joined a company and came to America. He first settled at Freetown, Mass., but became dissatisfied because of a want of sufficient support. In January 1724 he became a member of the New Castle Presbytery and accepted an invitation to preach at White Clay Creek and Brandy Wine. In 1733 he was called to Pequea, Pa., where he was very active in gathering up new congregations. He was released from Pequea Sept. 19, 1736. At a meeting of Presbytery Oct. 27, 1737, he was appointed a supply to Conodoguinet for six months. The following year he was called to supply the people of Hopewell, but was not installed until Oct. 13, 1738, on account of the difficulty in locating the church on the Big Spring and a trouble in his own family; having, without consulting his session, suspended his wife from church privileges, because she failed to live in peace in the same house with her daughter-in-law. Mr. Craighead was now well advanced in life, but he still preached with great power and impressiveness. Under his discourses the people very often deeply and powerfully moved, and often when dismissed they were unwilling to leave. On one of these occasions, near the close of April, 1739, during a communion season at the Big Spring Church, when having preached until quite exhausted, he waved his hand, being unable to pronounce the benediction, and exclaimed, "Farewell, farewell," fell to the floor and expired in the pulpit. He was buried beneath the pulpit in which he died.

REV. JOHN BLAIR, D. D.

Rev. John Blair was born in Ireland in 1720; came to this country when quite young, and it is thought his father settled in Chester County, Pa. He and his brother Samuel received their classical and theological education under William Tennent at the Log College at Neshaminy, Bucks County, Pa. He was licensed to preach by the Newside Presbytery of New Castle, and was ordained pastor of the congregations of the Three Springs, Big, Middle and Rocky, Dec. 27, 1742. Just when he left this charge is uncertain. It was, however, in 1757, or prior to that time, as in that year he accepted a call to Fagg's Manor which had become vacant by the death of his distinguished brother, Rev. Samuel Blair. Here he continued for ten years, taking the place of his brother as pastor of the church and principal of the classical school which his brother had conducted. In 1767 he was chosen to fill the newly founded chair of divinity in Princeton College, and was also chosen vice-president, and was its acting president until Dr. Witherspoon entered upon his duties in 1769. It soon became evident that the fund contributed to endow the chair of divinity was insufficient for the support of the professor. Accordingly Dr. Blair resigned his position and accepted a call to Walkill, Orange county, N. Y., where he continued until his death, December 8, 1771. He is said to have been a "judicious and persuasive preacher, and through his preaching sinners were converted and the children of God edified." Fully convinced of the truth of the doctrines of grace, he addressed immortal souls with a warmth and power which left a witness in every bosom." He married the daughter of John Durbarrow of Philadelphia.

REV. ROBERT COOPER, D. D.

Rev. Robert Cooper, was born in Ireland about 1732. His father died when he was a child, and at the age of nine, he came with his mother and two sisters to America and settled in Lancaster county, Pa. Like many others, he was greatly indebted to the energy and economy of an excellent mother, for obtaining an education, and manifested his appreciation of the same, by his affectionate, filial devotion. He prepared for college under Rev. John Roan, pastor of the New Side congregations of Paxton, Derry and Mt. Joy, entered Princeton College and graduated September 1763. He studied theology with Mr. Roan and Dr. George Duffield, of Carlisle, was licensed by the Presbytery of Donegal, Feb. 22, 1765, ordained and installed pastor of Middle Spring, November 21, 1865.

Dr. Cooper had a good library for his day, a part of which had been selected and purchased for him in Scotland, by Dr. Witherspoon. He was a well read theologian and noted for being a theological instructor. A number of young men read theology with him, who afterward attained distinction in the church. They were Dr. John McKnight, Dr. Joshua Williams, Dr. Francis Herron, Dr. Matthew Brown, Dr. David McConaughy, Rev. Samuel Wilson, and others. Dr. Cooper was moderator of the United Synod of Philadelphia and New York, in 1775, and was a member of the committee to prepare rules for the government of the assembly in 1785. He married Elizabeth Kearsley, of Carlisle, by whom he had two sons and two daughters. One son died in infancy. The other son John had charge of Hopewell Academy. Dr. Cooper died April 5, 1805, and is interred in the lower grave yard at Middle Spring, where the first log church was built.

REV. JOHN MOODY, D. D.

Rev. John Moody was born July 4, 1776. His father, Robert Moody, Esq., was a native of County Derry, Ireland, and emigrated to this country about 1773, and settled in Cumberland County, Pa. He married in 1775, Mary Hutchinson, and afterwards moved with his family to that part of Lancaster County now known as Dauphin County. There the son John prepared for college in the grammar school of Francis Hindman. He entered the junior class of Princeton College Nov. 1794, and graduated in September, 1796. He commenced the study of theology under his pastor, Rev. James Snodgrass, August, 1799, and was licensed by the Presbytery of Carlisle, Oct. 9, 1801. He spent one year and a half in supplying vacant churches, and preaching in destitute places, under the direction of Presbytery. On April 12, 1803 a call was presented from the Middle Spring church, which was accepted and he was ordained and installed Oct. 5, 1803. He continued pastor of this church for over fifty years, resigning April 14, 1854. "Dr, Moody was a man of a meek and quiet spirit, patient under opposition and even injury, and always a lover and promoter of peace. He was tall of stature, of stately personal appearance, dignified and gentle, manly in his deportment, polite and courteous in manner, a man of sound, practical judgment and methodical and industrious in his habits." As a preacher he was logical, instructive and practical. His manner in the pulpit was quiet, dignified and solemn. He always wrote his sermons in full and preached from the manuscript. His sermons were finished in style and he was eloquent and impressive in their delivery. He received the title of D. D., from Washington College. He married April 1, 1802, Miss Elizabeth Crawford and had four sons and four daughters. Dr. Moody died Oct. 7, 1857 and is buried in the upper graveyard at Middle Spring.

REV. ISAAC N. HAYS.

Rev. Isaac N. Hays was a son of John and Orpha Hays, and was born April 17, 1827, near Cannonsburg, Pa. He was the oldest of three brothers, all of whom have risen to prominence in the Presbyterian Church. He graduated from Jefferson College, June, 1847 and from the Western Theological Seminary in 1850. He was licensed April 15, 1850 by the Presbytery of Ohio, ordained Oct. 10, 1850, by the Carlisle Presbytery and installed pastor of the Great Conewago Church. Mr. Hays ministered to the needs of the people and labored zealously for the welfare of the congregation. He spent four years in this field, and resigned in 1854 to accept a call to the Middle Spring Church. He served fourteen years of acceptable ministry, increased the financial condition of the church, and beloved for his many sterling qualities, he withdrew from the congregation of Middle Spring, and was installed pastor of the Central Church Chambersburg, which charge he held until June 1874. He received a call from the Presbyterian Church at Junction City, Kansas, and left the Cumberland Valley, but the drought and grasshopper plague which befell the west, prevented his acceptance of the call, and in 1875 he returned to Pennsylvania, and took charge of the State Normal School at Shippensburg. In 1878 he severed his connection with the school and began his pastorate in the Central Presbyterian Church, Allegheny, Pa., where he successfully labored for ten years, when he resigned and ministered to the Westminster congregation, Allegheny, until the time of his death May 23, 1894. He received the degree of D. D., from Washington and Jefferson College. He married December 17, 1850, Rebecca King, and had three sons and five daughters, one of whom Calvin C. Hays succeeded his father in the gospel ministry and is an earnest, persuasive witness for Christ.

REV. D. K. RICHARDSON.

Rev. D. K. Richardson was born in Tuscarawas Co. Ohio, January 7, 1836. His father was for a number of years an honored elder in the Presbyterian Church. He graduated from the Western Theological Seminary in the spring of 1863, and was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Maumee, at West Liberty, Ohio, April 30, 1863. He was ordained as an evangelist at Napoleon, Ohio, November 22, 1864, and for six years labored as stated supply to several charges in the north-western part of the state. On January 1, 1870, he accepted a call to the church at Middle Spring, and continued his ministry there until December 21, 1871, when he was called to labor at Greencastle, Pa. His death occurred August 20, 1877, and not only the people of Greencastle, but many who knew his worth, mourned his removal as a great loss to the church. He married Miss S. L. Hosack and had five children, four sons and one daughter.

REV. SAMUEL S. WYLIE.

Rev. Samuel S. Wylie was the youngest son of David and Harriet B. Wylie, and was born December 2, 1844, three miles from the town of Washington, Pa. He was early consecrated to God and brought up from infancy in the principles of our holy religion. He worked upon his father's farm until the age of sixteen, when he was sent to the preparatory department of Washington College, where, he spent two years, and entered the Freshman class of the same institution. In the year 1867 he was graduated from the United College of Washington and Jefferson, and in the autumn of the same year entered the Western Theological Seminary, from which he was graduated April, 1870. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Ohio (now Pittsburg), April 28, 1869. The summer of 1870 he spent as stated supply to the churches of Cherry Tree, Unity and Bethesda, in Indiana County, Pa., and on October 28. sailed for Scotland. He spent the winter of 1870 and 1871 at the Theological Seminary of the Free Church of Scotland in Edinburg. He returned to America 1871 and on June 11, 1872 was ordained and installed pastor of the Middle Spring Church, where he remains at the present time.

The fact that Mr. Wylie has remained pastor of this historic and intelligent congregation for more than a quarter of a century is conclusive evidence of his sound common sense, his great prudence, his sterling piety and his warm and devoted affection for his people. Had these attributes of character not been his, it would have been impossible for him to maintain his pastoral relations with a congregation that had been moulded by a Dr. Cooper and a Dr. Moody, for almost a century. It is true, conditions have changed since the days of these good men. Mr. Wylie did not find a community composed altogether of Scotch Irish Presbyterians who knew nothing else than the Presbyterian Church, as was the case during Dr. Cooper's pastorate and most of Dr. Moody's. A new element was there, which not being Presbyterian, required prudence and tact to bring into the church. These conditions were early recognized by Mr. Wylie, and adapting himself to them, by modern methods of church work, has kept the church active and zealous in every good work, and still in advance of the other denominations that surround them and occupy the territory at one time exclusively Presbyterian. Middle Spring Church, with its wings, occupies an extent of country from Shippensburg to the north mountain, and from near Strasburg to Green spring, with preaching points at Middle Spring, Newburg, Orrstown and Roxbury.

During a pastorate of twenty-seven years Mr. Wylie has been indisposed only one Sabbath, has delivered 3500 sermons and addresses, admitted to the communion of the church an average of seventeen per year, preached three hundred and fifty-nine funeral addresses, and the congregation has raised for benevolence, improvements and salary, forty-seven thousand dollars, the membership of the church being two hundred. Mr. Wylie married Jane Mary McCune, who died Jan. 22. 1897, leaving three children Harriet Ann, Eva McCune and Samuel D. On the 9th of Feb. 1899, Mr. Wylie sailed for Europe and spent six months abroad. He landed at Naples, Italy, and visited the now voiceless city of Pompeii, and the active volcano of Vesuvius. He took ship for Egypt, spent some time in the city of Cairo, and continued his journey to Palestine. Five weeks were passed at Jerusalem, Jericho, Bethany, Bethlehem, Shechem, Nazareth, Damascus and historic places in the valley of the Jordan. From the Holy Land, he visited in turn the classic city of Athens, Rome, Venice, Paris, London and came home refreshed and strengthened for the duties of life and the labors of his ministerial calling.

THE GLEBE.

Life's turmoil in each year that passes,
Falls not upon this sacred spot.
And silently the slender grasses
Wave over paths too soon forgot.

On the 27th of May, 1767, there was surveyed and sold to Francis Campbell, Robert Chambers, William Duncan and John Maclay a tract of land situated in Hopewell township, Cumberland County, Penna., called "Mount Hope." This tract of land was in the shape of a wedge, the head extended along the Middle Spring, beyond the old graveyard, and the sharp point reached almost to Means' run in the direction of Shippensburg. It contained forty-nine acres, a hundred and ten perches, for which the State of Penna., received the sum of £9 and 19 shillings. The patent bears date Sept. 17, 1790, and in Nov. 1793, the above mentioned men deeded the land to the trustees of the Middle Spring Church.

On December 3, 1813, nine acres and nine perches of this tract, were sold at public auction to Mr. Samuel Cox for $150.00 per acre, the purchase included the water right, as well as the land lying along Middle Spring. Twelve years later, May 10, 1825, twenty-four acres and fifty-three perches of the remainder were bought by Mr. George Deihl for the sum of $486.62. The ground on which the parsonage was built, with the lower part of the subjoined lots, was never sold and belonged to the patent of 1790.

The central and upper parts of the three lots were sold by the trustees, but later were re-purchased by the church. The central one of the three parts was purchased of the trustees by George Deihl; this Levi Deihl, his executor, sold to Daniel Byers, who later sold it to Mary Cox ; she sold it to John Cox. The next purchaser was Mr. Wonderlich for Wm. Culp and on Oct. 16, 1854, through R. S. McCune it was bought back again for the church. $600.00 was paid for this including the sexton's house.

Sixteen of the original forty-nine acres of the Glebe lands are now in possession of the Middle Spring congregation. From the elevation, the greater part of the land overlooks a stretch of country unsurpassed in beauty and fertility, with farm houses dotting the hillsides ; a ridge of mountains to the south-east, over which the sunbeams climb to greet the day ; and a similar crest on the northwest, behind which the shades of evening fade away. Around the old graveyard winds the Middle Spring, its sunlit waters leaving a silvery trail over stones and mosses, blending with the gentle breeze a whisper of music which hovers above the sleeping place of the dead. To those who slumber here, we owe a debt of gratitude for selecting a spot so beautiful and worthy of admiration, on which to consecrate a house of worship. Loyal to their God and their church are the descendants of those staunch Scotch Irish pioneer defenders of the faith, who so nobly implanted the seeds of Presbyterianism in the Cumberland valley.

CHURCH BUILDINGS.

Few congregations in the Cumberland Valley, are so highly favored as Middle Spring, in being able to determine definitely, the date of the erection of their first church building, and ascertaining its dimensions. We are indebted to an old Carlisle newspaper, for the following historical data. "In 1738 the Presbyterians living in the vicinity of Middle Spring met to devise a plan for building a church, and the result of the consultation was the erection of a log building about thirty-five feet square, at the gate of the old graveyard, near the bank of the stream." From this meagre description we allow imagination to picture the house in which our fathers worshiped. The earth constituted the floor rude benches made from slabs, were all the congregation had to sit upon during the long service ; the pulpit high against the wall, with the precentor's desk beneath ; no heating apparatus ; the primitive style of the early settler demanded no decorative art to adorn the house of God. This building continued to be used as a place of worship until 1765, when it was replaced by a second, similar in style to the first, but its dimensions increased to forty-eight by forty-eight feet, the site of which was the same as the original log building. Owing to the rapid increase of the congregation, due to emigration and the popularity of Dr. Cooper, a short time prior to the Revolution, this second building was enlarged by additions on the sides and by a gallery, which was reached by two flights of stairs on the outside of the building. It was from the top of this stairway that Dr. Cooper, with his sword thrown over his shoulder, by stirring appeals in behalf of their country's needs, fired the patriotic blood of the brave men of '76.

The following has been handed down as having occurred during one of these addresses. An old lady in the audience after listening to the Doctor for some time, finally being unable to restrain herself longer, cried out, "Mister Cooper. Mister Cooper, if you had lost two as purty boys as I have in the war, you wouldn't talk that way, but you would go yourself." The Doctor seemed to act on the suggestion and later entered the service as chaplain, Nothing is known of the internal appearance of the church except that the pulpit was of walnut and an unusually fine piece of workmanship for that period. When the church was torn down the pulpit was purchased by Samuel Cox, Esq., and converted into a table which yet remains in his family. About the year 1781, the old stone church was erected, the site of which was just beside that of the present building. This was still larger than its predecessor, being fifty-eight by sixty-eight feet, and was necessarily so, by reason of the rapid increase in population. It was two stories in height, with the roof resting upon the walls, having at first no roof stool. This caused the north wall to bulge some six inches, and to remedy this a row of long pillars reaching from the floor to the ceiling, a distance of thirty-five feet, were placed across the entire building.

A gallery extended around the three sides of the house, at a distance of eleven feet from the main floor. Under the gallery for its support stood a row of eight pillars, besides those that stood against the wall, four in number. On the north side of the church were two large windows to the right and left of the pulpit, each contained one hundred panes, with shutters which reached half way up. Three large panels, finely ornamented in the style of the time, with a brass knob adorning the centre of each, for the minister's hat, stretched between the two windows back of the pulpit. On the west and east sides were three windows and a door below, and four windows above. On the south side there were two doors and four windows below and six windows above. One large aisle ran through the church from east to west, while two others opened into it from the doors on the south. The goblet-shaped pulpit was reached by a flight of ten steps, in which stood a bench for short preachers. Immediately above was the sounding board, surmounted by an acron whose green "leaves faded never."

Underneath the pulpit stairway was a small cupboard, and at the foot of it stood the precentor's desk, the platform being raised one foot above the level of the church floor. Immediately in front of the pulpit was the large chancel in which were placed the communion tables, and on the minister's right were the seats for the members of session. The seats in this church were forty-six in number on the main floor, and thirty in the gallery, straight back and high. The whole interior of the building was of the finest carpenter work, performed by James Cooper and John Thompson. This part of the work cost about £939. The entire outlay for the building, besides voluntary work, amounted to £1,310 and 16 shillings. The wood work in the interior was painted white, with the exception of the pews, which were unpainted. Originally the audience room was heated with two stoves, but in 1824 three more were added. On the outside of the church, one of the stone steps adjacent to the south corner was of limestone, while those nearest the west corner were of sandstone. A row of locust trees ran along the front of the church, between which were benches of ash slabs, where relatives and friends gathered at intermission, to exchange salutations and discuss matters of mutual interest.

The present Presbyterian Church building of brick was erected in 1847, and in November was dedicated, when the Rev. John Moody offered the dedicatory prayer. In the year 1858, during the pastorate of the Rev. I. N. Hays, the edifice was enlarged by an addition of twelve feet at the south end, which gave a larger vestibule, a prayer meeting room, and increased the seating capacity of the audience room. The expenditure with the cost of heaters in the basement, amounted to $2,500. In the spring of 1871, during the ministry of the Rev. D. K. Richardson this same house of worship was remodeled at a cost of $4,666.00. The pulpit was lowered, the gallery taken away, the lecture room enlarged and the interior frescoed and carpeted in a modern and admirable manner. Again in 1891 the church edifice was repaired at a cost of $800.00. The present parsonage was built in 1855, on a part of the Glebe lands, and is a large, commodious brick dwelling, containing nine rooms. The cost of the parsonage was $2,500.00, the grounds $1,200.00, the stable $300.00. Total expenditure $4,000.00. The following is the list of a hundred and thirty subscribers to the stone church built in 1781. Capt. Samuel McCune heads the list with a subscription of £40. The pulpit built in 1786 was the result of contributions amounting to £66 ($165 00), donated by the women of the congregation.

RULING ELDERS OF THE MIDDLE SPRING CHURCH.

Next to their pastors, whom they consulted on all temporal affairs, the people valued the bench of elders, the "helps ordained of God," who exercised an oversight of the flock, and to whom, as unto friends, were submitted disputes between man and man, questions involving the rights of property and the rights of character. This is the explanation of so many trial cases of various kinds found in the old session books of all our churches, and we doubt not, the results were satisfactory for the most part, and usually in accordance with the moral law of God, to the saving of public exposure of character and impoverishing lawyers fees. Honest and upright were the men who co-operated with the pastors of this church and moulded the characters of those who lived within its bounds. Diligent laborers in the vineyard, by their walk and conversation, they led the flock to the living fountain of spiritual grace, and strengthened the inborn Scotch Irish Presbyterianism of the community. The first elders of the church of whom we have an account were the following, ordained in 1442,

John Reynolds, a public magistrate who lived in Shippensburg; Capt. John McKee, who lived near Newburg, and commanded a company in the Revolution; Allen Killough who lived on the Ridge road; David Herron, one of the grandest men of his day:

The following were ordained in 1744:

John Findley, who lived, it is probable, on the farm owned by John Mateer; William Anderson, who lived on the Ridge road.

The following were ordained in 1747 :

John Maclay, who lived near Roxbury, and Thomas McComb, who lived near Orrstown.

The following acted as elders during the ministry of Dr. Cooper, dates of ordination unknown. Col. Benjamin Blythe, who lived at the head of Middle Spring—was a noted Indian and Revolutionary soldier; Francis Campbell, who lived in Shippensburg, a man of the finest literary attainments, many of whose articles were copied in the English magazines; Thomas Montgomery, David Summerville, Col. Robert Peebles, who lived on the farm lately known as the General David Middlecoff farm (a Revolutionary soldier); Robert Peebles, William Sterrett, who lived on the ridge road; John Maclay, Sr., who lived at Maclay's mill; Robert Donovan, lived near Centre Square, Franklin county; John Herron, who lived at Herrons Branch; Col. James Dunlap, who lived near Newburg, a Revolutionary soldier; John Maclay, Jr., who lived near Roxbury.

The following were ordained Oct. 20, 1805 :

David Mahon, Sr., who lived on the farm recently known as the Hugh Craig farm; John Woods, Hugh Smith, Thomas McClelland, the noted singer.

James Linn, ordained before 1824.

The following were ordained Sept. 20, 1822 :

James Barr, James McKee, James Wallace, and probably George McGinness, Daniel Henderson and Benjamin Reynolds.

The following were ordained Apr. 16, 1828 :

Jacob Porter, John Cooper, son of Dr. Robert Cooper; William Rodgers, Alexander Peebles, Joseph Donovan.

The following were ordained Apr. 2, 1836 :

James R. Montgomery, the praying elder, Joseph M. Means, Robert McCune, of the Pike, John Shannon, who went west in 1840, and James Kelso.

The following were ordained Dec. 30, 1849 :

Samuel Wherry, Robert S. McCune, David S. Renshaw and Abraham S. McKinney.

The following were ordained Sept. 3, 1857 :

James B. Orr, Robert Elliott, W. A. Cox, Benjamin A. Peebles, and David Reside.

The following were ordained Oct. 4, 1874 :

W. A. P. Linn, William D. Means, Alexander Pomeroy and Robert H. McElhinny.

In 1876 the session consisted of members as follows ;

James B. Orr, W. A. Cox, B. H. Peebles, R. H. McElhinny, Alexander Pomeroy, W. D. Means and W. A. P. Linn.

In 1900 the session consists of W. A. Cox, W. D. McCune, W. D. Means, W. C. Creamer, Murray Fickes, Robert Peebles.

SONS OF THE CHURCH WHO ENTERED THE MINISTRY.

“One of the richest legacies which Middle Spring Church has bequeathed to the world, and one of the striking features of her history, is the number and worth of her sons in the ministry.”

William Linn was born in Lurgan township Feb. 27, 1752. He was the oldest son of Wm. Linn, a ruling elder in the Middle Spring Church. After pursuing a preparatory course under Rev. George Duffield and in the school of Rev. Robert Smith, at Pequea, he entered Princeton College, where he was graduated in the class of 1772. He studied theology under his pastor, Rev. Robert Cooper, and seems to have been licensed and ordained by the First Presbytery of Philadelphia, or that of New Castle, in 1775 or 1776.

He was installed pastor of the Rocky Spring church April 9, 1800 and his connection with that people was not severed until 1811, when he accepted a call to the First church of Pittsburg. Here he successfully labored until 1850, when he retired from the ministry on account of advanced age. He died Dec. 6, 1860. In February, 1802 he married Elizabeth Blain, of Carlisle, Pa., who died in 1855.

James Linn Rodgers, son of James and Jane (Linn) Rodgers, was born near Shippensburg May 5, 1827; was graduated from Jefferson College, 1847; from Princeton Theological Seminary 1850; licensed June 12, 1849, by Presbytery of Carlisle; ordained by Presbytery of Donegal, May 2, 1851, pastor at Donegal; pastor at Mt. THE UPPER GRAVEYARD.

THE GRAVEYARDS.

Sacred the shades where our loved ones are lying,
Tenderly guarding, a vigil we keep.
Softly above them the breezes are sighing,
Sweetly they slumber, not dead but asleep.

Among the hallowed spots of earth, there is none to which we turn with greater reverence, than the country graveyard, where unbroken stillness reigns, subduing the heart for the touching lesson which it learns, as the eye rests upon the quiet sleeping place of the dead.

The oldest enclosure at Middle Spring is especially interesting, because of its connection with the long ago, when the early settlers knelt beside the new made graves and

A holy benediction, as sweet incense filled the air,
While they laid their dead to rest in the lonely wild-wood there.

Few of these devout pioneers sleep in marked graves, the oldest slab bearing date 1770.

The lower yard was used as a burial place from the earliest history of the church, and within its bosom is the dust of thousands, while in the four yards, Lower, Upper, Hanna's and the Cemetery, it is estimated there have been seven thousand persons laid to rest. Surrounding the lower burial ground is a massive limestone wall, erected prior to 1805 and is yet in as perfect a state of preservation as though but recently built. Here sleep the brave, the fair, the christian, the hero, the slave and

“There are graves whose rudely shapen sod
Bears the fresh foot prints where the sexton trod.

Graves where the verdure has not dared to shoot,
Where the chance wild flower has not fixed its root.
Whose slumbering tenants, dead without a name,
The eternal record shall at length proclaim
Pure as the holiest in the long array
Of hooded, mitred or tiara'd clay."

With the dawn of the nineteenth century came demands for a more extended burial place, and a second graveyard, on the hill in the rear of the church, was consecrated for the use of the congregation.

In 1842, at a cost of $800.00, this yard was enclosed by a wall of limestone, corresponding with that around the lower yard. The entrances to both are hung with heavy iron gates and the interest of a sum of money is yearly expended in keeping the two yards in good condition. The grave of Dr. Moodey is in the upper graveyard, and to the memory of Dr. Cooper the congregation erected a monument in the church yard, that those who go in and out to worship may be reminded of the worth of the pastors who labored here. At the entrance to the church yard is a sand stone shaft, to the memory of the brave men who went out from the Middle Spring church and lost their lives in defense of their country, during the war of the Rebellion.

Hanna's graveyard, one mile north of Newburg, was opened a hundred years ago, for the accommodation of members of the congregation living beyond the Conodoguinet, who had difficulty in crossing the stream when the waters were high, before the bridges were built. The dust of scores of early settlers rest in this lonely place, which is now in a state of neglect. Few of the graves are marked, briars and weeds overshadowing the conseerated spot where many of the noblest of earth lie asleep.

Adjoining the upper burial ground is a tract of land known as the Cemetery deeded to the church in 1890 by Mr. William Duncan McCune, and dedicated as a slumbering place for those who worship at Middle Spring. The yards are all so full, that it is impossible to secure lots in any but the latter ground.

In these four sacred spots are the families of Quigley, Brackenridge, Peebles, Orr, Clark, McKinney, McCune, Frazer, Pomeroy, Duncan, Herron, Linn, Patterson, Maclay, Means, Nevin, Reynolds, McClelland, Rodgers, Hays, Thompson, Strain, Wherry, McElwain, Cox, Linn and many others. Decade after decade of time rolls by, unheeded by them; year after year adds many a grassy mound to the thousands on which have fallen tears of affection; the murmur of the stream caresses the mossy steep, where heroes and loved ones sweetly sleep; the morning light tinges with gold the hallowed sod; the purpling twilight lingers ere the night comes on; the snow flakes mantle the hillside; the night wind sighs in the topmost boughs of the forest trees; the light-hearted pass by; the thoughtful pause beneath the shades; lover and friend bow in mute submission, while the tomb hides what was dear; and still the children of Middle Spring slumber on, unmindful that their resting place is one of the most beautiful on earth.

MIDDLE SPRING IN THE REVOLUTION.

The Scotch Irish are justly credited with being the first to respond to the call for defenders of the liberties of the colonies against the aggression of the British. Not only did they respond promptly to the call, but it was largely through their instrumentality that the call was made. The characteristic foresight and aggressiveness of the race early recognized the interference of the mother country, and expeditiously gathered themselves together in public meetings to express their indignation and offer their protests against the encroachments of those, who were assuming unjust rights and responsibilities.

The most noted of these was the Mechlenburg Declaration, in which the citizens of Mechlenburg County, North Carolina, on May 31, 1775, absolved themselves from all allegiance to the British crown, declaring themselves a free and independent people, under no control but the power of God and general government of Congress.

Then we have the Westmoreland County resolutions, adopted May 16, 1775, bearing testimony against the arbitrary laws of Parliament. The action of these people anticipated the united action of the colonies in Philadelphia, more than a year. While the fires of patriotism were being kindled in different parts of the country, the inhabitants of Cumberland County were up in arms to defend their rights.

On July 12, 1774, nearly a year before the Mechlenburg Declaration, the citizens of the different townships of Cumberland County, assembled in council in the First Presbyterian Church of Carlisle, of which the venerable John Steel was pastor, for council and deliberation on the stirring events of the times. This assembly solemnly declared that the inhabitants of Boston, by the enforcement of the obnoxious Port Bill, "are suffering in the common cause of all the colonies." Robert Megaw, James Wilson and William Irvine were appointed deputies from the county, to meet other deputies from the several counties of Pennsylvania, to concert measures, preparatory to the general Congress. The deputies left for Philadelphia, where the committee was to meet, on the 15th of the same month.

We find the names of these three members from Cumberland County registered as taking part in the proceedings of the provincial committee, holding their meeting in Carpenter's Hall, while the Assembly was deliberating in the State House. The important matter resting on the Provincial Committee, was, to impress Assembly with the necessity of calling a congress of deputies from all the colonies, and to make the appointment of such from Pennsylvania at once. The Assembly heeded this importunate plea, and as a consequence the first Continental Congress was held in Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, September 5, 1774. Cumberland County was again represented by nine deputies at the Provincial Council in 1776.

The important place occupied by Middle Spring, and her influence in the valley at that time, can be judged from the fact, that three of those nine deputies were members of her communion. These staunch defenders, John Maclay, Hugh McCormick and Hugh Alexander, declared that the Scotch Irish of the Cumberland Valley had one voice for the union of the separated colonies and they helped by personal contact and patriotic address, to lead the thirteen colonies, by their representatives, to unanimously adopt the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776.

The cause of civil and religious liberty in the hearts of our ancestors, was greatly strengthened and directed by an able, self-denying ministry. This is especially true of the Presbyterian clergymen of the Cumberland Valley.

Rev. John Steel, of Carlisle, who, in his earlier days had been a leader in the expeditions against the Indians, now became Captain of the first company that marched from the Valley after the Declaration of Independence.

Rev. John King, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Mercersburg, said to the men of his charge, who were about to enter the conflict, "The cause of American Independence and Liberty, which has now called you to go forth to the scene of action, is indeed a cause in which it will be glorious to conquer and honorable to die." After urging his men to duty, he accompanied them as chaplain.

Rev. John Craighead, whose peerless eloquence and soul stirring appeals moved his people to go to the field of strife, placed himself at their head as captain, performing also the double duty of chaplain.

Rev. William Linn, was appointed chaplain of the Fifth and Sixth Penna. Battalions, February 15, 1776. Shortly after the Battalion was ordered to Canada, he resigned and accepted a call, April 9, 1777, to the Big Spring church, at Newville.

Rev. Robert Cooper, then pastor of the Middle Spring church, entered into the struggle with his whole soul, believing with his ministerial brethren, that the cause of American independence was a divine cause, that in the struggle, not only the rights of men, but the sacred interests of Christ's Kingdom were involved. It may be that the intense love of country shown by Dr. Cooper, was partly due to the fact that he was in Philadelphia, as moderator of the synods of New York and Philadelphia, in May 1776, and while there, became surcharged with patriotism, and from the fulness of his heart, poured it forth upon his people on his return, until they, catching his spirit, resolved to enlist in the defense of their beloved land. Certain it is that no church in this valley, or elsewhere, that we know of, sent as many men into the patriot army as the Middle Spring church, and well may she be proud of her record. Brave were the hearts of the noble Scotch-Irish defenders of their country, and sacred are the shades, beneath which their consecrated dust awaits the resurrection morning, when they shall answer the last roll call.

The following persons took part in the Revolutionary war and were members and adherents of the Middle Spring church. The companies in which they served are given as fully as could be ascertained on searching the public records. The military titles borne by some, were no doubt conferred after the war, perhaps from military service, many appearing on the rolls as privates in the war, who in after years were given a title.

HOPEWELL ACADEMY.

Hopewell Academy, although not an institution of the Middle Spring Church, was so closely connected with it, and exerted such a great influence in the enlightenment of the generation in which it flourished, that a history of the church would be incomplete without reference to it.

This institution, as far as can be ascertained, was established by John Cooper in the fall of the year 1810, and took its name from the township in which it was located.

The school building was an oblong structure, of hewn logs, with a single entrance, sliding windows, and a gable projecting over the end towards the road, unsupported by pillars. It stood near the mansion house of the farm to which it belonged, on the east. The road from Shipensburg to Newburg at that time, ran directly by the academy building.

John Cooper, the founder and only teacher of the school, was the only son of Rev. Dr. Cooper. He was a graduate of Dickinson College, and studied for the ministry, but owing to failing health, was obliged to abandon the ministry and take up farming. Having followed this vocation for a time, he conceived and carried out the idea of starting a classical school. For the profession which he chose, Mr. Cooper was admirably adapted. He was universally and justly esteemed one of the best linguists of the day. His instruction was rudimental and thorough. He had himself been a pupil of James Ross, author of the Latin Grammar, then generally used. Like Ross, he required his pupils to learn and apply with much exactness, the rules of grammar, and analyze and parse sentences and words, taken at random from different parts of the lesson. As a result, so proficient in this respect, were they regarded, that when they presented themselves at any of the colleges for examination, the mere announcement of the name of their preceptor gave them a passport to entrance into the classes to which they aspired.

Besides the superior scholarship of Mr. Cooper his character was so complete as to exert a most happy influence upon the youth under his care. "He was," says Dr. D. B. McGinley, "one of the most amiable of men. I do not remember to have seen his temper ruffled, though the boys often tried him sorely. He was very courteous in manner and treated every one who approached him with the utmost politeness. Even his correction of an error in recitation was so mild and gentle, as to bear with it a seeming apology." Soon after the commencement of the school it was well attended for one of its character. in a country place, and under a single teacher. Much of the time the small building was crowded, the students coming largely from abroad, all parts of the Cumberland valley being represented. Those who came from abroad were boarded and lodged in the family of Mr. Cooper, or found accommodations in the houses of the neighborhood. Many rode several miles each day on horse back from their homes. The school was kept up with almost no intermission until 1832, when it was discontinued because of the extreme debility of Mr. Cooper. The moral, christian influence it exerted, had a highly elevating effect on the community and the Middle Spring church. It also sent out to the world scores of men who attained positions of usefulness and influence, and many who reached distinction.

Among the earlier students were, Samuel, William and James Woods, from near Carlisle, David and Joseph Trimble, living near Newburg, Wm. Henderson, M. D., David Wills, M. D., subsequently an eminent physician in Chillicothe, Ohio; Andrew P. Linn, Rev. James Smith, Alexander Sharp, D. D., Rev. John H. Kennedy, William McClure, of the Harrisburg bar; J. W. McCullough, D. D., James Williamson, pastor at Silver Spring; Moses Williamson, pastor of the Cold Spring church; N. J. McKnight Williamson, an able Presbyterian minister; William H. McClure, an eminent judge in Pittsburg; — Beattie, a Baptist minister, and two cousins, bearing the name of Robert Scott.

Mr. Cooper married Miss Kearsley and to them were born six children, Robert, Samuel, Jonathon, Sarah, married John Reynolds, of Roxbury; Jane, married John Smith, of Hopewell township; Elizabeth, married Mr. Stettinius, of Virginia.

To Mrs. Cooper is due much of the success of the academy during the last ten years of its existence, when in her husband's declining health, she was able financially and intellectually to maintain the influential status of the school.

APPENDIX.

The foregoing records have been carefully copied from the original Church books, some of which are yellow with age, and the contents almost obliterated. This accounts for any unavoidable discrepancy in dates. The omission of names in the list of births and marriages, indicates neglect on the part of the pastors to record them. If mistakes occur in the tombstone inscriptions, they are due to the defaced condition of the markers, rendering the deciphering of them difficult. For genealogical purposes, the ages have been reduced from date of death, to ascertain time of birth, and published accordingly, instead of giving the number of years at date of death.
